HUNGARIAN ELECTIONS: PEOPLE ARE RISING UP

With almost all of the votes counted and a high voter turnout (69%), the ruling Fidesz party receives 49% of the vote. This vote of confidence in favor of Prime Minister Viktor Orbán gives his party a 2/3 majority in the new Hungarian Parliament with 133 out of 199 seats.

The left opposition has been defeated by the Hungarian voter. The political forces who defend the Hungarian identity won by a landslide. As in recent elections in the Czech Republic, Austria and Italy, voters are demanding a stop to mass migration imposed on the nation states by the European Union. People want to preserve their identity, their freedom and their national unity.

By protecting the borders of Hungary, Viktor Orbán not only protected his own citizens and their Christian culture and heritage, but also those of the other European nations. Therefore, not only the Hungarian voters showed their gratitude and support, but the patriotic parties united in the ENF group are expressing their congratulations to Prime Minister Viktor Orbán.

Co-president Nicolas Bay MEP: “As the recent elections in Austria and Italy also demonstrated, people want to preserve their sovereignty because they want to defend their identity, their security, their economy and their values. The wind of change is coming to Europe through the ballot box.”
